

Follow up activity ideas for “I Need a New Bum”

You can watch the story again here: <https://youtu.be/62PxKaZQPBM>

Talk about the story

Use these suggestions as points to talk about using your communication system. An adult can record the answers following the talk around each question, if you like. (Adults: remember to use the communication device, too, to model vocabulary. This will really help your student/child. If you don't know where words, that's great, you can work together to find them!).

Watch the story again if needed and talk about...

1. Ross Kinnaird, who drew the pictures for the book, is very good at drawing expressions to show how the characters are feeling. Look at the faces of the characters in the story. How do you think each character is feeling? How do you know?

Did you find the following feelings?

Happy	Important	Worried	Confused
Embarrassed	Afraid	Cheeky	Excited
Naughty	Shocked	Proud	Surprised
Miserable	Terrified

2. Choose your favourite bum from the book and say why you think it's the best bum. You can watch the story and tell someone to "stop" when you get to your favourite!
3. What is something new you would like? Why?
4. What new things would everyone else in your family like?

Other books to read

"I Don't Like Farts" by Jane Farrall

<https://www.janefarrall.com/i-dont-like-farts-book-to-share/>

Or this one from TarHeel Reader

<https://tarheelreader.org/2020/02/20/no-one-likes-a-fart/>

 Perhaps you can make a list like this in your family – what does everyone think about farts? Have everyone finish the sentence: I think farts are _____.

Here's another book with lots of different names for farts:

<https://tarheelreader.org/2010/06/19/dont-say-fart/>

Here's a read aloud of a story about a dog who farts a lot, which comes in handy ☺:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nhem2-jL2Ok>

And this one is about a fart looking for a friend:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TWJ38ec4XII>

or watch it here to practice using core words "more" and "finished":

<https://tarheelgameplay.org/2020/05/12/no-one-likes-a-fart/>